THE FURTHER ADVENTURES OF ORALLiens ON “THE THIRD ROCK FROM THE SUN”

The ORALLien region of the planet is beginning its annual rotation toward the sun and, meteorologically speaking, conditions are improving all around.

“Aye, they’re a grand bunch, Captain. I’ve observed them making preparations for some type of annual gathering of the clans. A generous lot too, I venture to say. The leadership is offering money to their fellow ORALLiens in an effort to encourage attendance at the national assembly planned for July 19 - 23 in Baltimore, on the eastern shore of their continent.”

This is true. ORALL has available at least $500.00 to be awarded to one or two members in an effort to defray the costs of attendance at the AALL Annual Convention in July. Applicants should complete the form that is printed in this issue of the Newsletter and return it to Cindy Spohr at the address indicated. The Education Committee will review the applications and award the amounts according to circumstances described and the number of Annual Conventions attended in the past. Everyone interested is encouraged to apply. Ask the regular attendees, the educational programs and the networking opportunities at AALL combine to create a function of galactic proportion.

While at the Convention, visit the ORALL display table in the Activities Area of the Exhibit Hall. Peruse and collect items indigenous to ORALLien culture. Add something if you like. It can easily be an interactive display for all ORALLiens.

Also, plan to breakfast on ORALLien fare at the Annual ORALL/MichALL Breakfast. At present, it is anticipated that this event will be held on Monday, July 21; however, in order to comply with AALL’s “no-conflict” schedule (providing ample time for Exhibit Hall cruising), our arrangements may be adjusted somewhat. Watch for a communiqué detailing CONTRIBUTIONS INVITED!!!

In Memoriam
William A. Newman

Our close-knit ORALL family lost a very special member on Sunday, January 12, 1997. Dr. William A. "Bill" Newman, Director of the Trumbull County (OH) Law Library passed away unexpectedly in his home from a heart attack.

Bill was known for his warmth, genuine spirit of friendliness, and his quick sense of humor. He willingly volunteered his services to the Association in whatever capacity was needed. His assessment of issues and their ramifications was a benefit to all.

Unknown to some was Bill's outstanding educational background. He received his bachelor of arts degree in business administration from Brooklyn College; his masters in political science from Queens College; a juris doctorate from Capital University School of Law; and his Ph.D. in library and information science from Case Western Reserve University. He had served as the Trumbull County Law Librarian for the last seven years.

Personally, Bill was an avid collector of elephant memorabilia and enjoyed listening to jazz and collecting CBS. He served in the Army Reserves until 1977 and was awarded the Bronze Star and Vietnam Service Medal while serving in Vietnam.

We will miss Bill. Many of us have already felt the loss. The members of ORALL extend to Bill's widow Mary and to their son Peter our deepest sympathy, along with whatever comfort there may be in knowing that he was respected by his colleagues and will be remembered often and fondly by his friends.

Introducing.....

CAROL’S CORNER

by Carol Parris,
University of Kentucky Law Library

This is the first effort at what will be a regular column of light-heated, tongue-in cheek musings by Carol Parris, Reference/Document Delivery Librarian at the University of Kentucky College of Law Library.--editor

In these days of ever-growing end user electronic products in law libraries as well as in law firms and homes, we law librarians are becoming more and more distressed concerning our future employment prospects. With all the commotion concerning outsourcing and downsizing of law libraries, our future looks bleak at best.

Out of that bleak portrait of things to come shines a ray of hope and promise in the way of cottage industries for law librarians. Some of us at the University of Kentucky Law Library have decided to widen our knowledge base and expand our efforts. Two words suffice: CHIA HEADS!!!! That’s right, CHIA HEADS.

The Law School sits next to the Home Economics building which houses a deli and a restaurant. We hope to become the exclusive CHIA grower and supplier of fresh herbs for these two restaurants and as time passes perhaps we can expand our operation to include all the eating establishments on campus. This would be a relatively easy operation; we could each have a CHIA Head on our desk and just water and harvest occasionally. The ease of CHIA head maintenance would allow us to continue to supply a high level of reference service as well as having a decorative desk ornament.

Also, we hope to introduce an entirely new line of CHIA products for the law library. These might include but are not limited to: CHIA Book, CHIA Citator, CHIA Digest, CHIA Lawyer (may be interchangeable with CHIA Shark) and CHIA Laptop. You may view the CHIA home page at http://www.chiapet.com to get ideas for your own CHIA-based cottage industry or if you have any CHIA ideas or products you might like to share please e-mail me at carol@pop.uky.edu.

Until the next newsletter, may all your reference questions be easy ones!

TIPS FOR CONDUCTING EFFECTIVE MEETINGS
by Donna Bennett,
Assistant Director for Collection Services & Administration, Chase College of Law Library, Northern Kentucky University

Meetings, meetings, and yet more meetings! Do you ever wonder what a workday would be like without them? So much of our work, however, is accomplished through committees, task forces, teams, as well as other groups. Because we meet for so many different reasons, and we have so many things we want to accomplish, we need to make certain that the time we devote to meetings is time well spent. Meetings which seem to go on forever and accomplish little or nothing leaves us feeling extremely frustrated. The following are guidelines to insure that our meetings accomplish their intended goal.

1.) Never call a meeting unless you have a specific reason to meet.
If your department or unit is working on a new project you will need to meet originally to clearly define the project and to set deadlines, if that is possible. A follow-up meeting may be necessary to discuss problems individuals are encountering. At some point, however, meeting will simply take time away from the project, and the individual in charge of calling the group together should be on the alert to recognize when that time arrives.

In the same vein, regularly scheduled staff or faculty meetings should be canceled for the month (or whatever the time period) if there is nothing on the agenda for the meeting. Most of us can usually find something to talk about, of course, when we get together, but we need to question if that is the best use of our time if we have no specific topics to discuss.

There may be times when getting together and just talking or brain-storming about a specific issue or concern is beneficial. Being able to discern when this is needed will help to insure the productivity of any meeting.

2.) Determine prior to the meeting what you want to accomplish.
Preparing an agenda is an effective way to do this. If the meeting is one which is primarily for the sharing of information, such as a staff meeting, it is a good idea to allow staff to participate in preparing the agenda. Simply posting a sheet of paper in an area available to everyone, such as near a lounge, etc., a few days before the meeting will usually suffice.

Each person can indicate their topic and their name. This is an excellent way to encourage participation in the meeting.

3.) Set a time for the meeting to begin and a time for it to end, and then be certain to adhere to these times.
This will allow participants to plan the rest of their workday. If a firm ending time is known by all it also helps to remind everyone that time is limited and encourages participants to focus on the issues at hand.

4.) Focus. Focus.
State the subject of the meeting or if an agenda is available the chair should provide everyone with a copy or should briefly read through it. The chair or convener is responsible for keeping the meeting moving and should not allow any one topic or person to dominate.

5.) Encourage participation.
While encouraging the group to stay focused on the issues, the chair should also encourage participation from all members. Meetings which are dominated by the chair or another member of the group are seldom successful. The interchange of ideas and the sharing of information usually has a positive impact upon the success of the meeting. Encouraging participation and involvement helps to increase the commitment of each member of the group. A committed group of individuals is often a very productive group.

6.) End the meeting on time.
It really is a good idea to be firm about this. In the long run it will help your group to stay focused. Be sure to summarize the meeting and its accomplishments. If a future meeting is needed this is usually a good opportunity to set the date and time.

Working in groups can be very rewarding. Following a few basic guidelines will enable us to have more enjoyable and productive meetings. A little planning can, indeed, go a long way.
Medley of Marketing Ideas

Tired of singing the same song in your public relations products? Promoting a library’s services and a librarian’s skills can bewilder and perplex the best of us at times. What better place to discover a new theme, hear a different orchestration than at the AALL Public Relations Exhibit in Baltimore.

Sponsored by the Public Relations Committee, this annual event (formerly the Poster Session) features displays of successful promotional efforts from many creative law librarians in all types of libraries. Come to the PR Exhibit, located in the Exhibit Hall, for fresh ideas. You will have a chance to talk to the experts at scheduled times Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, and pick up samples of their work.

If you have composed something special that you think other librarians should see, please consider volunteering to exhibit your materials at this year’s AALL meeting. We seek all kinds of promotional items—brochures, fund-raising ideas, posters, National Library Week celebrations, newsletters, multi-media—that sing the benefits of using and supporting our libraries. For further information and to volunteer please contact one of the co-ordinators listed below. Let us hear from you!
